

1. Le message, son aspect général :

La technique utilisée est un lien à cliquer « clicking here »:

Ce message nous a été transmis sous le format html obtenu depuis un « webmail ». C'est pour cette raison que l'image proposée par le fraudeur n'est pas visible ici... mais le lien est resté actif !

Le code associé est reconnaissable :

<td width="530" class="texte">
<A HREF="http://www.lasallebank.com/customer_service/custinfo_confirmationhtml">
  <map name="ignq">
    <area coords="0, 0, 723, 391" shape="rect" href="http://218.9.7.188/.../la/">
  </map>
<img SRC="http://... /webmail.fcgi?ID=... &Body= »2" border="0" usemap="#ignq"></A>

David Blaine I am a Pregnancy Diwali in 1901
</td>

La signature en bleu fera peut-être sourire ?

L'utilisation d'une image avec MAP est largement répandue dans les essais de phishing.

Review the Consent to Electronic Delivery of Disclosures - Step 1 of 3

By clicking the "I Accept" button below, I consent to receiving the agreement and disclosures for the LaSalleOnline banking and bill payment service, the LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement, including any future amendments, any subsequent disclosures such as periodic statements or changes to the terms of the agreement, and any other communication related to LaSalleOnline, electronically. I understand that the Bank may not provide periodic statements and amendments to the agreement to me electronically at this time, but does not waive its right to do so in the future. The LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement is available electronically as part of the online application process for LaSalleOnline and is available as a PDF file in the Online Banking section of the LaSalle Bank web site. (PDF files require Adobe® Acrobat Reader® software that may be downloaded for free from the Adobe web site at <http://www.adobe.com/products/acrobat/readstep.html>.) Both of these versions of the LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement may be printed. I acknowledge that if I would like the Bank to provide me with a printed copy of the LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement, I must contact Online Banking Customer Service by email through the Online Banking Service or by telephone at (866) 904-7500.

The electronic version of the LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement, any subsequent disclosures and any other communication are available in HTML format and may be accessed through the Internet using Microsoft Internet Explorer Version 5.0 or higher or Netscape Navigator Version 4.7 or higher with a personal computer that supports these web browsers.

I acknowledge that I may withdraw my consent to receive electronic disclosures at any time by contacting Online Banking Customer Service by email through the Online Banking Service or by U.S. mail at LaSalle Online Banking Customer Service, Attn: 790-701, P.O. Box 4907, Chicago, Illinois, 60680-4907. However, if I withdraw my consent, the Bank may immediately terminate my enrollment in the Services, including online banking, and bill payment and presentment.

If my email address changes, I agree to provide the Bank with my new email address as soon as possible, by sending an email message to the Bank through the Online Banking Service. If I do not provide the Bank with notice of my new email address, the Bank will have met its obligations to provide electronic notice if it sends electronic notices to me at the most recent email address that the Bank has in its records.

By clicking the "I Accept" button below, I also acknowledge that I can access this information in the electronic form that is used to provide this consent form and will be used to provide the LaSalleOnline Consumer Services Agreement, any subsequent disclosures, and any other communication related to LaSalleOnline.
